The situation now has changed drastically. The President of PARI had originally contacted First Virginia Communications for use of its site and understood that space would be available for the PARI antenna. However, an insufficient meeting of the minds had occurred and principals of First Virginia disagreed that its site was available and informed the Commission that PARI had not obtained permission for use of the WMJR tower.

Subsequently, however, counsel for First Virginia has informed PARI's counsel that principals may now negotiate terms for use of the WMJR tower and such negotiations are impending. PARI accordingly shows that it has reasonable assurance of using the WMJR tower.¹ The informal objection of Praise Communications Inc. is accordingly moot and should be dismissed.

Respectfully submitted,

POSITIVE ALTERNATIVE RADIO, INC.

¹ Prior to First Virginia's agreement to negotiate, PARI had contacted two other tower sources in the area, so if a satisfactory arrangement is not obtained with First Virginia, PARI is by no means out of a site.

In re: WPVB (FM), Culpeper, VA
Positive Alternative
Radio, Inc.
File No. BPPED-880119IF

Dear Mr. Moskowitz:

This is in reference to the April 29, 1991 informal objection which you filed on behalf of First Virginia Communications, Inc. ("First Virginia"), the licensee of WMJR(FM), Warrenton, Virginia, with respect to the subject application filed by Positive Alternative Radio Inc. ("PARI") for modification of facilities of WPVB(FM), Culpeper, Virginia. In its application, PARI proposes to modify its construction permit to change transmitter location and increase antenna height above average terrain. PARI intends to mount the antenna of WPVB(FM) on the same tower used by WMJR(FM). First Virginia's informal objection alleges that PARI lacks reasonable assurance for this

In light of the submitted documentation, PARI has demonstrated that it has obtained reasonable assurance that it may locate its antenna on the WMJR (FM) tower. Accordingly, the informal objection filed by First Virginia Communications, Inc. is without merit and IS HEREBY DENIED.

Sincerely,

Larry D. Eads, Chief
Audio Services Division
Mass Media Bureau
